Frances O'Brien, traveling auditor and relieving agent on the Grand Trunk railway between Montreal and Portland, was in town one day last week. Mr. O'Brien was at the Norway station for some time before the breaking out of the world war, and went into service with Company D.

Mrs. Anna H. Hayes and Mrs. Alton C. Wheeler were at Lewiston Wednesday going to attend the wedding of their nephew, Miss Bernice B. Ham. On Tuesday Mrs. Hayes went from there to Bangor, where she will spend the week-end with her daughter, Mrs. Rodger W. Brown.

A very interesting and instructive program was carried out by Mrs. McLaughlin, the study book and home mission enticement being used. The next meeting will be at the parishage Thursday, Dec. 28.

George A. Doran lost his camp with contents in Great Pond Sunday evening. The family had been at the camp during the day, and left in the afternoon, with everything about the camp all right as far as they knew. The light of the fire was seen about 10:30 that night, but nothing is known as to the cause. It was camp built to be comfortable in any weather, and well furnished.

Keep in mind that great fifty cent chicken pie and cream cake supper with 125 dishes which will be given by the Ladies Social Union at the Universalist church on Tuesday evening, December 5, the 125th anniversary of the church. Make other engagements this is to be a big affair. Will all who have received the Red Letter Day cards issued last January please return them the night of the supper and take same over to Mrs. L. A. Abbott, president of the Union.

Readers of the Democrat ever stop to think how many important social events take place in the village each week? There are quite a number of them. The L. E. Pike Co. clipped eight of them from last week's Democrat to use as a window advertisement. They were pasted on a blue display board, with the query underneath in gilt letters: "Did you have clothes suitable for the occasion?" which brings out the suggestion that a man can't be in the swim without clothes.

Mrs. M. G. Folson of Gardiner gave the earnest address on the work of the Union at the Central Oxford District meeting of the Young People's Christian Union held at the Universalist church Friday evening. This followed the business meeting of the Union. There was a good attendance of the young people, a considerable number coming from Norway, and some from West Paris and Bangor. A buffet lunch was served to both the home folks and the visitors, before the meeting.

John Pierce's window is very attractive and suggestive of Thanksgiving. It is a most successful display. After looking at it one could not enjoy the feast without being lured by sparkling silver, cut glass and china. There is only one fault to be found with it and that is the turkey furnished by Mr. and Miss Pierce rather small for a large company.

"Home made" does not mean misleading, but the glasses are there, so perhaps it is in the ice chest to go with the "hot bird."

William Roth was in Portland Wednesday and Thursday. While there he attended the Call-Cut-Cut concert. He was much impressed with the clear, sweet and flexible voice of the twenty-year-old Portland soprano who was evicted from the fact that City Hall was filled to the utmost with the most standing room left. Most of the director's program was unadorned classical selections which would show off the wonderful grace and beauty of her voice. Some of these were not so very familiar to the audience, sometimes they captured it completely. Perhaps the most beautiful was "Roméo et Juliette" as well known as any and in this the total beauty of the coloration of her heart's phrase. But one did not have to judge of her by these. For encores she remembered her American audience and treated them to their favorite ballads and "Benedictus" from the "Gold." "Way Down Upon the Swanne River" and "Sweet Adair," not forgetting "Home Sweet Home." Her husband, Homer, accompanied her. Her husband, Homer, was a fine singer, and her voice, clear, white, heavily embroidered with grace. Diamonds and pearls she wore in abundance—carriage, pendant and bracelet flashed with them.

A choir is now singing at the Universalist church service, consisting of Mrs. Beryl Parsons, soprano, Mrs. Agnes Perkins alto, Harry Conant tenor, Mr. Combellack bass. Mr. Combellack sang two solos at the service Sunday. Mrs. H. E. Wilson was the organist. The same choir and organist were at the afternoon service at the Norway Universalist church.

Mrs. C. W. Bowker entertained the Luncheon Club at her home Wednesday. This club is made up of eight ladies from South Paris and eight from Norway, who meet for one o'clock luncheon and afternoon of bridge. On Thursday Mrs. Bowker entertained a local club, when two tables were in play. The guests came at 2 o'clock, and remained for six o'clock dinner and the evening. The guests were Miss Louise Burnell, Miss Hattie Burnell, Mrs. W. A. Porter, Miss Carrie Hall, Mrs. H. E. Wilson, Mrs. J. D. Parlin, Mrs. C. C. Clifford, Mrs. J. D. Haynes, Mrs. Emma Mann.

One of the best Thanksgiving concerts ever given here was that at the Congregational church Sunday evening. The program was given by an orchestra under the leadership of Miss Grace Dean, and by a double quartette composed of the Congregational and the Norway choir, as well as by each of these choirs separately. A duet was sung by Mrs. Rose Whitman and Miss Abbott and one by Mrs. Edith Wheeler and George A. Cutting, and solos were sung by Mr. Cutting and Miss Wheeler. The church was filled, and the collection, which will be used locally to provide Thanksgiving cheer where it otherwise would not be had, amounted to $81.00.

Mrs. Mary Parlin Brown, after some years of failing health passed to the higher life Sunday morning, the 10th, at the age of 83 years.

Mrs. Brown was the daughter of Robinson and Hannah (Crawford) Parlin and was born in Paris on the Parlin farm situated on the road from Trap Corner to North Paris. Of the family of seven children born to them she was the last survivor.

She was united in marriage with Hannibal Gooden Brown May 23, 1865, at Paris, and she lived with him for 57 years at Lisbon, N. H., sixty-eight and one-half years in this town. Beginning housekeeping in the house on the corner of Main and Church streets when two or three houses constituted all of the West Paris settlement.

Three children were born of this union, Edwin H. Brown of Rumford, Charles, who died in childhood, and Jennie, wife of Will F. Dunham of East Sanguis, Mass. There also survives one grandson, Charles L. Brown of Rumford.

Mrs. Brown was a member of the Universalist church and in the early days of her life was an active worker, she and her husband being members of the church choir. She continued her interest after health and strength failed.

She was gifted with more than ordinary ability at writing verses and rhymes, a pastime which she greatly enjoyed and as well as the care of the beautiful flowers which adorned her home. A genial woman of much nobility of character, she made friends and kept them.

The funeral service was held from her late home Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Rev. H. A. Mackley of Norway, former pastor of West Paris Universalist church, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. Eleanor C. Fothergill, officiated. Beautiful flowers, which she loved so much, adorned the casket. She was laid to rest in West Paris cemetery.

A poem was read by Miss Forbes, which Mrs. Brown had treasured for many years, written by the deceased sister, and expressed much of the trust which had brightened and sustained her through these almost four score and ten years of life.

THE DEAD.

We would not stand in doubt and fear,
When dear ones pass from earth;
We write that one's dying day
Is better than his birth.

Oh, then bring flowers to show the bier
And tell us of the life they led;
We will not drop for want of dew
We have tears to shed.

We mourn, but yet we smile
Methinks their spirits, hovering near,
Tell that our dear ones are at ease,
Brush away the falling tear.

Why whisper to each lonely soul
That has our dear ones loved;
They have our dear ones loved;
For we are happy now.

We mourn; but not as those
Who without hope to grieve
In Heaven, the loved, the lost on earth
To dwell in misery.

Our faith is one that ever points
To brighter realms on high,
Where parting souls cannot come
And friends can never die.

Let not the weeping willow then
Reveal above the tomb;
Let the evergreen instead
Wave in the wind above.

As emblem of the future life
That we can know and see,
Where all mankind, redeemed from sin,
Shall meet in glory.

About the State.

Every Maine town has had its quota of hunters in the woods and few of them are returning home empty handed, judging from the newspaper reports.

Penobscot County jail now harbors 80 prisoners, the largest number in four or five years. Nearly all commitments were from the Bangor Municipal Court and largely on pleas for drunkenness which the reports were unable to pay.

The reason for the disappearance of many golf balls on the Augusta Country Club course has been solved. The culprit was a squirrel. From the little animal's nest, where he has been recovered 81 balls, some carrying imprints of the teeth of the squirrel, which evidently he has about there, and a new kind of nut.

During the past year, 154 babies have been born at the Webber Hospital at Biddeford. The largest number of babies received this hospital one day was 62 and the average daily was 54. The report of the superintendent, Miss Agnes W. Hennessey, showed that 1,124 patients had been received in the year.

The Penobscot River will be kept open to navigation by the use of ice breakers employed by the navy until Bangor recovers its supply of coal which is now on the way. Representative Tru G. Hersey informed the Bangor Chamber of Commerce that he has been given assurance that this would be done by the navy department.

Miss Zaidie L. Morrison, a former schoolwoman, has since Nov. 20th been showing her paintings, pastels, sketches and miniatures at the Misses Hill Galleries in New York city. Her exhibits include 80 specimens among which are loans from Miss Louise L. Gohman and Mrs. George O. Smith of Bangor, and Miss Morrison as well as her younger sister, Miss Margery Morrison, who is a wonderful pianist, and her brother, Donald Morrison, a talented violinist, are former Skowhegan people of whom the citizens are justly proud.

Cancer killed 41 people in Maine in 1921, which was the largest number destroyed by any disease. Cancer, like pneumonia, is steadily increasing, as are also the degenerative diseases of the heart and kidneys. Cancer is curable in its early stages because first it is a local disease and not a constitutional or blood disease. Once it is first a local disease, treatment in the early stages is often successful in removing every trace of the disease so that it does not return. If neglected, however, cancer spreads rapidly and gets beyond control. Our citizens must be taught the danger of neglect in its relation to cancer.

Plans for a campaign to obtain an appropriation from the State Legislature for the erection of a Pilgrim Monument at the site of Fort Western, the original Pilgrim trading center in Maine, at Augusta, were outlined at the twenty-first annual meeting of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities. The proposed monument would cost $100,000, which was recently donated by Guy P. Gannett and has since been restored. It is said to be one of the original garrison houses.

Arthur H. Norton, curator of the Portland Museum of Natural History, has returned laden with films and negatives from an expedition down the Kennebec in search of eagles. In the course of the trip he sighted twenty or more eagles. Besides seeing the birds themselves in larger numbers than most Maine people would think possible, Mr. Norton and his companion discovered an eagle's nest high in the top of an oak tree on the side of a hill, and in the nest were two young birds. The nest itself was considerably larger than the top of a small family dining table, but in spite of its size, was well screened by the thick foliage.

A man who has been successful in business and yet knows the value of art in the business of life is Oliver P. T. Wish, secretary and treasurer of the Portland Society of Art. For seven years Mr. Wish was associated with the Argus in the advertising department and was one of the first to realize the possibilities of advertising in selling goods. Mr. Wish in his capacity of secretary and treasurer of the art society, is manager of the art museum, and to be the most perfect museum, architecturally, in the United States. Since taking charge of the museum several years ago, Mr. Wish has become keenly interested in the art school which is under the direction of the society and has personally acquainted with the majority of students who have passed through the school. He has a fine collection of art from the Home Window pictures as he says, they have taught him to see beauty in dull colors and in the most humble of the earth. Mr. Wish is a lover of color and especially that found in little unexpected places in nature.

Tell the Democrat about your Thanksgiving guests. Many people are interested.

The Portland Press Herald runs happenings of the long ago in its columns taken from the files of the Eastern Argus. There are four different sets of these items—those of one hundred years ago, those of seventy-five years ago, those of fifty years ago and those of twenty-five years ago. In the issue of November 24, under the heading seventy-five years ago to day, appears this item: "Norway Liberal Institute was organized with an enrollment of 175."

This was in 1847 and the first term of this institute was also held in 1847, but this was evidently merged in the later school.
